OVERVIEW

Lawrence Schempp is the Director of Professional Development and Training at Marshall Dennehey. He is responsible for designing and implementing comprehensive legal and professional skills training programs for entry- and intermediate-level associates, as well as refresher courses for all attorneys in the firm on cutting edge and evolving legal issues affecting the litigation practice. He also oversees and coordinates the firm's continuing legal education programs for attorneys.

Before joining Marshall Dennehey, Larry was a member of the full-time faculty at the University of Pennsylvania Law School. At Penn he taught and supervised in the Civil Practice Clinic, a course in which upper-level students represented clients of the Penn Legal Assistance Office, a teaching pro bono law firm within the law school. His course included a seminar component in which students were trained, through the use of interactive exercises, role plays, videotaped simulations and film critique, in lawyering skills encompassing all aspects of civil litigation. In the fieldwork component of the course, students represented clients, under Larry's supervision, in civil matters pending in the state and federal courts and administrative agencies. A heavy emphasis on the application of the Rules of Professional Conduct was interlaced throughout the process. Larry also taught for 10 years as an adjunct professor at Drexel University Kline School of Law.

Prior to teaching, Larry had ten years of experience in complex commercial litigation practice, in both a large firm and a litigation boutique in Philadelphia. His primary areas of practice included shareholder, partnership and corporate governance disputes, employment and executive compensation disputes, complex contracts disputes, class action antitrust and securities litigation, RICO defense, products liability defense, and unfair trade practices cases in the state and federal courts.

Larry received his juris doctorate from Georgetown University Law Center in Washington, D.C. in 1990, and his Bachelor of Arts Degree from Temple University in Philadelphia in 1981.
